Essentials of Nursing Informatics

Notice

Medicine is an ever-changing science. As new research and clinical experience broaden our knowledge, changes in treatment and drug therapy are required. The authors and the publisher of this work have checked with sources believed to be reliable in their efforts to provide information that is complete and generally in accord with the standards accepted at the time of publication. However, in view of the possibility of human error or changes in medical sciences, neither the authors nor the publisher nor any other party who has been involved in the preparation or publication of this work warrants that the information contained herein is in every respect accurate or complete, and they disclaim all responsibility for any errors or omissions or for the results obtained from use of the information contained in this work. Readers are encouraged to confirm the information contained herein with other sources. For example and in particular, readers are advised to check the product information sheet included in the package of each drug they plan to administer to be certain that the information contained in this work is accurate and that changes have not been made in the recommended dose or in the contraindications for administration. This recommendation is of particular importance in connection with new or infrequently used drugs.

Part 1 — Nursing Informatics Technologies 1

Carol J. Bickford and Marisa L. Wilson

- 1 Historical Perspectives of Nursing Informatics • 3
Virginia K. Saba / Bonnie L. Westra / Juliana J. Brixey
- 2 Computer Systems Basics—Hardware • 29
Mary L. McHugh
- 3 Advanced Hardware and mHealth • 45
David J. Whitten / Kathleen G. Charters
- 4 Computer Systems Basics—Software • 57
Mary L. McHugh
- 5 Open Source and Free Software • 69
David J. Whitten
- 6 Data and Data Processing • 101
Irene Joos / Cristina Robles Bahm / Ramona Nelson

Part 2 — System Standards 119

Virginia K. Saba and Joyce Sensmeier

- 7 Health Data Standards: Development, Harmonization, and Interoperability • 121
Joyce Sensmeier
- 8 Standardized Nursing Terminologies • 137
Jane Englebright / Nicholas R. Hardiker / Tae Youn Kim

- 9 Human–Computer Interaction • 153

Gregory L. Alexander

- 10 Trustworthy Systems for Safe and Private Healthcare • 163

Dixie B. Baker

- 11 Social Determinants of Health, Electronic Health Records, and Health Outcomes • 181

Marisa L. Wilson / Paula M. Procter

Part 3 — System Life Cycle 193

Denise D. Tyler

- 12 System Design Life Cycle: A Framework • 195
Susan K. Newbold
- 13 System and Functional Testing • 219
Theresa (Tess) Settergren / Denise D. Tyler
- 14 System Life Cycle Tools • 235
Denise D. Tyler

Part 4 — Informatics Theory Standards 251

Virginia K. Saba

- 15 Healthcare Project Management • 253
Barbara Van de Castle / Patricia C. Dykes
- 16 The Practice Specialty of Nursing Informatics • 265
Carolyn Sipes / Carol J. Bickford
- 17 Foundations of Nursing Informatics • 287
Sarah Collins Rossetti / Susan C. Hull / Suzanne Bakken

Part 5 — Policies and Quality Measures in Healthcare 317

Kathleen Smith

- 18 Establishing Nursing Informatics in Public Policy • 319
Rebecca Freeman / Allison Viola
- 19 Quality Measurement and the Importance of Nursing Informatics • 329
Jean D. Moody-Williams
- 20 Using Six Sigma and Lean for Measuring Quality • 341
Evelyn J. S. Hovenga / Lois M. Hazelton / Sally R. Britnell
- 21 Informatics Applications to Support Rural and Remote Health • 355
Amy J. Barton
- 22 Communication Skills in Health IT, Building Strong Teams for Successful Health IT Outcomes • 363
Elizabeth (Liz) Johnson / Karen M. Marhefka
- 23 Nurse Scheduling and Credentialing Systems • 381
Karlene M. Kerfoot / Kathleen Smith
- 24 Mastering Skills that Support Nursing Practice • 393
Melissa Barthold[†]

Part 6 — Nursing Practice Applications 403

Heather Carter-Templeton

- 25 Translation of Evidence into Nursing Practice • 405
Heather Carter-Templeton
- 26 Improving Healthcare Quality and Patient Outcomes Through the Integration of Evidence-Based Practice and Informatics • 423
Lynda R. Hardy / Bernadette Mazurek Melnyk
- 27 Nursing Plan of Care Framework for HIT • 441
Luann Whittenburg / Avarretta Davis

- 28 Structuring Advanced Practice Knowledge: Curricular, Practice, and Internet Resource Use • 455
Mary Ann Lavin
- 29 Beyond EMR Implementation: Optimize and Enhance • 481
Ellen Pollack
- 30 Federal Healthcare Sector Nursing Informatics • 493
Stephanie J. Raps / Margaret S. Beaubien / Christine Boltz / Michael E. Ludwig / Chris E. Nichols / Gerald N. Taylor / Susy Postal
- 31 Monitoring Interoperability, Device Interface, and Security • 507
R. Renee Johnson-Smith / Jillanna C. Firth
- 32 Population Health Informatics • 521
Karen A. Monsen
- 33 Informatics Solutions for Emergency Planning and Response • 535
Elizabeth (Betsy) Weiner / Lynn A. (Slepski) Nash
- 34 Health Information Technology: Striving to Improve Patient Safety • 553
Patricia P. Sengstack
- 35 Consumer Patient Engagement and Connectivity in Patients with Chronic Disease in the Community and at Home • 567
Hyeoun-Ae Park / Naoki Nakashima / Hu Yuandong / Yu-Chuan (Jack) Li

Part 7 — Advanced Applications for the Fourth Nursing IT Revolution 583

Kathleen A. McCormick

- 36 New Models of Healthcare Delivery and Retailers Producing Big Data • 587
Susan C. Hull
- 37 Artificial Intelligence in Healthcare • 605
Eileen Koski / Judy Murphy

[†]Author deceased

- 38 Telehealth: Healthcare Evolution in the Technology Age • 615
Teresa A. Rincon / Mark D. Sugrue
- 39 Nursing's Role in Genomics and Information Technology for Precision Health • 635
Kathleen A. McCormick / Kathleen A. Calzone
- 40 Big Data Analysis of Electronic Health Record (EHR) Data • 653
Roy L. Simpson
- 41 Nursing Data Science and Quality Clinical Outcomes • 663
Lynn M. Nagle / Margaret A. Kennedy / Peggy A. White
- 42 Nursing Informatics Innovations to Improve Quality Patient Care on Many Continents • 677
Kaija Saranto / Ulla-Mari Kinnunen / Virpi Jylhä / Pia Liljamo / Eija Kivekäs
- 43 Global eHealth and Informatics • 693
Hyeoun-Ae Park / Heimar F. Marin

Part 8 — Educational Applications 707

Diane J. Skiba

- 44 Nursing Curriculum Reform and Healthcare Information Technology • 709
Eun-Shim Nahm / Mary Etta Mills / Marisa L. Wilson

- 45 The Evolution of the TIGER Initiative • 725
Toria Shaw Morawski / Joyce Sensmeier
- 46 Initiation and Management of Accessible, Effective Online Learning • 739
Patricia E. Allen / Khadija Bakrim / Darlene Lacy
- 47 Social Media Tools in the Connected Age • 757
Diane J. Skiba / Sarah Mattice / Chanmi Lee
- 48 A Paradigm Shift in Simulation: Experiential Learning in Virtual Worlds and Future Use of Virtual Reality, Robotics, and Drones • 769
E. LaVerne Manos / Nellie Modaress

Part 9 — Research Applications 791

Veronica D. Feeg

- 49 Computer Use in Nursing Research • 793
Veronica D. Feeg / Theresa A. Rienzo / Marcia T. Caton / Olga S. Kagan
- 50 Information Literacy and Computerized Information Resources • 825
Diane S. Pravikoff / June Levy

- Appendix Clinical Care Classification (CCC) System: Overview, Applications, and Analyses • 843
Virginia K. Saba / Luann Whittenburg

FOREWORD

In the years since the previous edition of Essentials in Nursing Informatics was published, U.S. hospitals have achieved nearly universal adoption of electronic health record (EHR) systems. Physician offices are only slightly behind in joining the digital ranks, and health professionals across the nation now utilize EHR systems in daily practice. The “HITECH Act” has forever changed health informatics, and we now face new challenges in improving usability, interoperability, and learning capability of these systems. With the rise of artificial intelligence and a need to reduce documentation burden required by current EHR systems, we see significant opportunity and responsibility for healthcare providers to address these challenges. Nurse informaticists are at the center of this transformational opportunity.

Historically, care teams communicated primarily through written notes in the patient chart. Paper represented a technical barrier, as the best patient care is dependent on data availability over time, across locations, and among healthcare team members—including the patient. Access to the most accurate and complete information remains vital, and nursing informaticists are leading much of the work being done to improve the speed, accuracy, and utility of clinical information.

We have made progress in gaining nearly instant access to patient data and evidence-based decision support that enables nurses, physicians, and other clinicians to make better decisions about patient care. These technologies, however, require continued optimization of the technology, the interoperability, and the workflow to drive improvement in user experience, reduce documentation burden, and improve patient outcomes.

The accelerating demands for gathering and using data to improve patient care and clinical operations have increased awareness of informatics as a core skill, intensifying the need for clinicians to better understand these increasingly ubiquitous technologies. This edition incorporates updated teaching aids to help educators develop more sophisticated users of technology, who are equipped to improve processes and workflows that result in safer, more effective, and efficient patient care.

As the specialty that integrates nursing science, computer science, and information science to manage and communicate data, information, and knowledge—and ultimately, build wisdom—into nursing practice, nursing informatics is uniquely positioned to help lead the optimization journey that will simplify data capture, promote sharing of data in a mobile environment, and create high-performing, patient-centric clinical information systems.

The vision for a better future of healthcare is tightly associated with the future of health information technology, and data are the fuel for this journey. Thus, nurse informaticists are critical healthcare leaders for the 21st century, experts in the right place at the right time, bringing the clinical, technical, and leadership skills together to create effective partnerships among their numerous constituencies—leadership teams, clinicians, data scientists, information technologists, and more. Their role is central in advancing value and science-driven healthcare, and so their work in moving healthcare informatics from data management to decision support is essential.

In the 15 years since the call for EHRs was made in the 2004 Presidential State of the Union message, we have witnessed rapid evolution of health information technology and its use in healthcare systems. The next 15 years will bring the increasing convergence of data from myriad sources outside of the formal healthcare setting into the context of clinical care. We will move up the analytic hierarchy from descriptive to diagnostic, predictive, and ultimately prescriptive and autonomous systems. Thus, the future of this field promises both challenge and opportunity for prepared participants.

Just as the field has evolved, so has nursing informatics. Its practitioners have already provided tremendous energy, insight, and leadership in helping to establish the necessary infrastructure and in driving gains in healthcare technology competency, information literacy, and better healthcare outcomes. Now more than ever, we believe nursing informatics holds great promise to enhance the quality, continuity, value, and experience of healthcare.
